And not a soul was ever lost; That he is safe on the ocean there, As I am here in his easy-chair; That I am foolish to sit and brook,-It does me harm, and him no good.

Perhaps it is so. You may be right;
But, in the stillness of the night,
I lie awake, when the wind is high,
And clouds are sweeping athwart the sky,
And only think of what may be,—
Of the howling tempest, the surging sea; The savage waves that rise, and dash On the shuddering ship with an awi Till the sturdy bulwarks are swept away By a weight no work of man could stay The cracking masts that splintering fall; And the cries of terror above it all. The horrible din of death I hear; And among the taces all blanched with fear I see one so often raised to me In tender, loving sympathy, Whose eyes, so gentle and so bright, Are wild with horror and affright.

The form I have rocked upon my breast, And hushed in its baby years to rest, And guarded and cherished so long a All helpless, alone, in the surging hell. I hear my name in the hurried prayer That comes at the moment of dread de When, far on its billows swept away, The ocean roars with its struggling prey

But this is foolish, you say, and weak; And to argue my thoughts away, you seek It is very kindly done: But I am his father ; and here, at home, I picture the dangers that may have come To him, far, far away from me, Away on the treacherous, pitiless sea, My dear, my only son. c. J. s.

Incidents in the Life of a Peddler. Fred Griswold was what might be called a speculating peddler. Born and brought up as he had been in Connecticut—he possessed all that shrewd cunning and knowledge of mankind, so essential to one of his calling, and for which the Yankees are so celebrated. He knew his man at a glance, and could guess the kind of goods a man would want by the looks of his premises. He was not, however, as the reader may suppose, a dealer in wooden nutmegs, tin ware, brass clocks, or anything of that nature, but a regular traveling merchant, with "a little of everything," from a paper of pins to the most splendid broadcloths.
He was a native of Connecticut, as we before stated, but he had emigrated to the western part of New York, and settled in western part of New York, and settled in the town of C—which place he made his head quarters, and from whence he made excursions not Pennsylvania, Virginia, Maryland, &c. He had followed the profession from the age of fourteen, and his favorite policy was never to refuse anything a man might offer in payment for goods, trusting to his own ingenuity to dispose of trusting to his own ingenuity to dispose of the articles thus of thined to advantage. He eldom lost mone upon them.

Af one time he was travelling with his toad through a new settlement in Ohio, and stopped his team before a neat looking log together one of those substitutes for a fence known as a "brush fence," around his garden.
"Hallo, friend," said Fred, do you wish to purchase anything to-day. "Can't" said the man, pausing a moment,
"I haven't any money—nothing to pay "O, never mind," replied Fred, in his usual bland tone, "I'll take most anything."

The man saw he was determined to have a trade, and so in order to get rid of him. he said: "Well, sir, I am just building a piece of brush fence, and if you'll take that I don't know but we can trade." "Oh, I'll take it if you'll keep it until I "Oh yes I'll do that," said the man, sur-prised at the accommodation of Fred, and trying to assign some reason for it in his own mind. He finally concluded that Fred had heard of him, and intended doing him a favor; and as he was really needy he de-termined to accept of it in the spirit in which it was offered. So a bargain was made for his fence, he received the goods and Fred took his note for the fence, to be delivered at sight. The man paid a high price for his goods, but as long as he could pay in brush fence, he thought they were cheap enough at any price.

Two or three years passed, and though Pred often called at the house did considerable tending, yet, he never demanded pay the trading, yet he never demanded pay ment on his note. In course of time, when the man began to prosper, he burned up his rude fence and substituted a neat picket in its place. About two weeks after this was done, Fred came that way again and called.

"Good morning, Mr.—," said he on entering, "I have found a place where I can dispose of my fence to advantage, and have called for it." The man saw he was caught in a trap, and as there was no way to avoid it, he paid Fred the money, laughed heartily at the joke, and bade him good morning.
Fred gained considerable by this. He not only made a fair profit on his merchan-dise, but secured the friendship and patronage of the man, and likewise all the in ce he could command in the neighborhood, which was considerable, to secure him Among Fred's numerous friends was of Pennsylvania. Fred always made the Judge's house his home when he traveled that part of the country. The Judge was a fine jovial old fellow, fond of a joke, and was always trying to get a joke upon Fred whenever he stayed with him. One day sometime in the year 183-, Fred ing through and put up with him over night. In the morning he was determined to drive a trade of some kind with the Judge, offering in his usual way to take anything in payment.

"Pil tell you what I'll do," said the Judge laughing, "I've got a first rate grind stone out in the yard, and if you will take that I will trade it out."

"Very well," said Fred, "I'll take it; it's just as good pay as I want.'

They went out to the wagon, and the Judge traded out his grindstone, which Fred loaded on his wagon and started. He had not gone far before he saw a customer and stopped his team.

"Good morning, Squire. Want anything all the feelings, emotions, and sentiments all the feelings, emotions, and sentiments." in my line this morning?" "Well, don't know, Fred," replied he, in hantering tone, "got any grindstones?"

Yes, sir, got a first rate article, just come out and look at it."

Now it happened that the man really did want a grindstone; he was acquainted with Fred and spoke in the way he did because he had no idea that Fred land one. "I like the looks of that stone," said he after examining it, "and as I want one very much, and you take anything in payment, I'll give you six cents a pound for it, (four cents was the regular price,) provided you will take such property as I turn out to you in payment." "Certainly," said Fred. "I always do." "Yery well, how much does it weigh?"

"lust forty-eight pounds." said Fred as he proceeded to unload it.
"Now come with me, Fred," said the squire, grinning, when this was finished, "and get your pay." Fred followed him to the stable. "There," said he pointing to a bull calf about six weeks old, which was standing in the stable, "there is a first, rate calf worth just three dollars which I suppose will pay for the

"Very good, just as good pay as I want," and Fred as he unfastened the calf and led him to his wagon. "But stop a minute," said he "I shall be back this way in about two weeks and if you will keep him until then I will pay you for it."

"Oh, yes, I'll keep him for you," said the squire laughing as Fred drove off, at the idea of having beat him. He supposed that Fred would never call for the calf, but he did not know his man. At the end of the their brains over an extraordinary problem did not know his man. At the end of the their brains over an extraordinary problem time specified Fred returned, and when he called, the squire had nothing better for it called, the squire had nothing better for it has been down and when he called, the squire had nothing better for it has been down and was discovered and remains the called the company was discovered and remains the called the called the squire had nothing better for it has been down and the company was discovered and remains the called than to give up his property. of whom Fred spoke was a man known to procure some of this stock but as it was at that time very scarce and bore an exceedingly high price he had not been successful. His curiosity was at once aroused—and he became very anxious, after he had examined it a little more closely to purchase it.
'It's one of the regular Durham sure,'

"Couldn't part with him for any such money, Col. Davis is to give me seventy five as soon as I get home."
"Well, you won't take him clear home with you and if you'll let me have him I'll give you fitty dollars."
"No can't do it, I've disappointed the Col two or three times already and he would not like it if I should disappoint him again. "But," said the Judge, now becoming anxious "you can tell him you have not been over the mountains."

and if you will give me seventy-five dollars I don't know but you may take him." The Judge was delighted with his pur chase, and paid Fred the money on the spot. As they were taking the calf to the such as I want for three dollars. "Perhaps you can," answered the Judge, in a few years when they become more In the morning as Fred was about start-

MR. EDITOR: As lobsters have been annually growing scarcer for a number of years past I think it high time to commence raising them artificially. That they can be so raised I feel assured. As the lobster carries its spawn under its tail the period for hatching can be readily discerned by examining the eggs. When ripe the young fish can be easily detected. fish can be easily detected. To artificially propagate lobsters I would suggest the following plan: Put the female lobster in a box four feet long, two feet wide, and three feet deep, or sufficiently high to prevent it climbing out. Nailstrips of scantling on the sides, about one foot of scantling on the sides, about one foot from the top. To prevent the box sinking too deeply, cover the bottom with a wire sieve, and place in each end a wire sieve, with gas-tar or varnish. Anchor the box in some quiet cove. When the proper time arrives the young lobsters will hatch and leave the mother. How to properly care for the young future experiments only can determine the sides, about one foot nizance of, and to get him into safe keeping. Is there a child lost? Three of the most famous battles recorded English history were marked by a strange contrast between the behavior of the opposing armies on the eve of fight. At Hastings, the Saxons spent the night in singing, feasting and drinking; while the Normans were confessing themselves and receiving the sacrament. At Agincourt, "the poor condemned English" said their prayers, and sat patiently by their watch-fires, to "inly ruminate the morrow's danwhile the over confident French reveled the night through, and played for the prisoners they never were to take. On the eve of Bannockburn, says Paston, who fought there on the beaten side, "ye might have seen the Englishmen bathing themselves in wine, and casting their gorges there was crying, shouting, wassailing, and drinking, with other rioting far above measure. On the other side we might have seen the Scots, quiet, still, and close, fasting the eve of St. John the Baptist, laboring in love of the liberties of their country." Our readers need not be told that in each case the orderly, prayerful army proved victorious, and so made the treble parallel perfect. Kite Navigation. The kite navigation of the sound proved successful on the second attempt, which was made by John F. Lacey, from Bridgeport, Tuesday afternoon. After the loss of one kite another was procured, and at two o'clock "sail" was again hoisted, care being taken to fasten the line securely to the boat. The kite was 10 feet by 8, was made of cloth, and had 100 feet of tail. The boat was an ordinary twelve-foot row boat, and was provided with a rudder. Charles Booth was the only passenger beside Mr. Lacey. But little steering was necessary, but it was found that the boat could be kept six points to the windward by the use of the rudder. Port Jefferson was reached at 5:15 p. m., the trip having been made in two hours and afteen minutes, and beating a good sail-boat more than an hour. The boat shipped no water, and the passengers had not a single adventure during their rapid journey. At father Port Jeffersen, last evening, they were the "Hons of the hour," and returned to Bridge- and fee port by steamer. -Standard.

Some facts as to the cost of keeping the metropolis in order may be of interest to your readers. To properly police this city requires an army of 2,500 men besides the number required to officer them. There are forty captains, besides inspectors, and an additional force of detectives, whose business is the hunting down of criminals and the finding out of things dark and strange that require more shrewdness than ordinary mortals are supposed to be gifted with. To support this force requires the neat sum of $3,000,000 annually.

One of the curious sights of city life nowdays is the sailing of the Floating Hospital of St. John's Guild, on its excursions for mothers and sick children. No one who has never tried to raise children in a crowded city even with command of unlimited means, knows what unwearing care it demands, and the children of the poor seem literally born but to die. How can it be any other way, when the air they draw from their first breath is thick with foulness as the Mississippi water with silt, and they right hand, and his right elbow on his left hand, and said thoughtfully; "Just so. All for the good of society in the long run—an admirable sentiment, my dear sir; let it be a consolation to you if I should cause you to skin and bone with care, drudgery, and liquor plodding the frozen ground with bare purple feet, as I have seen them in the dead of winter, or the crushed, white-faced men, worse despair, but the woful, wan faces of the babies, lifting weary eyes to the sky, as wondering why distant heaven left them so long to such a fate; babies hanging to over-drained breasts, from which every scanty drop they drew came straight from the mether's failing health. I have seen a large framed Scotchwoman, built for strength and brought up in the open air, crying with weakness, because the food she could get could not nourish her and her child. Another time I saw a white, poorly dressed man sitting in Central Park with a baby covered with sores held tenderly in his arms. Every other day, as often as he could leave his work, he brought it from Mott street, one of the most squalid in the city, five miles, that it might have the fresh air for two or three hours before sundown. He said the childs illness was caused by bad air poisoning its blood, and he looked at the little scarfaced creature as if he would gladly have opened every one of his own poor veins to save its drooping life. The stardy members of St. John's Guild are men of the working classes, who see and feel the wants of their poorer neighbors, as those removed from them cannot do, and, headed by the Rev. It prefers a marshy soil, in which it grows to a gigantic height with great rapid-ity. It dries the soil by the evaporation from its leaves, and shelters it from the sun, thus preventing the generation of marsh miasm. Its wood is as hard as teak. Every part of it is impregnated with a balsamic, oil-of-camphor-like odor; and, besides a notable quantity of astringent matter, it contains a peculiar attractive, which is supposed to contain an alkaloid allied to quinine. At any rate, its efficacy in intermittent and marsh fevers has gained for it in Spain the name of the "fever tree." "Smoking car, sir ?" asked the polite porter, as he bore my rugs and minor packages along the platform. I said yes, and he made me comfortable, and received his dime. Then the guard came to look after my well being, but got nothing more than innocent gratitude, which was perhaps all he desired. I have no doubt that I did him injustice in attributing his efforts to induce a fat old gentleman with a cough-a lean old gentleman who was snuffy, and a mid-dle aged gentleman enveloped in wraps, the lower part of whose face was covered up like a female Turk's, an evident window

I sat in the left-hand corner with my back to the engine, absorbed in a big law-sult. It is great fun to read a cross-examination and watch how a clever lawyer will make an honest man perjure himself. I tried to rise, but my right wrist was seized, and the arm twisted till ! wrist was seized, and the arm twisted till I was helpless, and presently I found myself on the floor of the car, face downward, a sharp knee being scientifically pressed into the small of my back, both arms fixed behind me. My cllows were tied together, and then the knee was removed, and my ancles were secured. During the latter operation I kicked and struggled.

"Hum?" said a deliberate voice, "that will be awkward. Let's see; these will do!"

These were my sticks and umbrella, which some one proceeded to apply as splints to the backs of my legs, using the straps which had kept them in a bundle to fix them at the ancle and above the knee. When he had done I was as helpless as a trussed

Our Harbor Improvement.

The contract for continuing the Government work in digging out our harbor has been awarded to Mr. E. R. Seward of Albany, the gentleman who executed the work last year. He has had much experience in contracts of this kind, and will bring men to do the work who thoroughly understand the business. He writes that he expects to complete his arrangements at two weeks. Mr. John H. Lee has again been appointed Government Inspector, and will give faithful attention to his duties. Mr. Starr, we believe, will continue as Engineer in charge. The contract price is much less than last year.

The Center School.

This school opened promptly last Monday and was conducted during the week in a very satisfactory manner by the lady teachers. On Friday morning the committee closed an engagement with Mr. Earle G. Baldwin to fill the position of Principal, and he commenced his duties yesterday morning. Mr. Baldwin studied at Amhers College, and has had about ten years experience as a teacher. He comes here from Belchertown, Mass. The school is in excellent condition, and it is the desire of the committee that its course shall continue to be "onward and upward.

SAD ACCIDENT .- A sad accident occurred at the residence of Mr. Geo. W. Shaw, on Riverside Avenue, last Saturday afternoon, esulting in serious injury to Mrs. Currence Kellogg. A teamster was endeavoring to enter the yard with a load of coal; it being up a steep grade the Horses were unable to get up it when Mrs. Kellogg, who happened to be calling at the house, tried to assist the driver by blocking the wheels so as to give the Horses a rest. Befere accomplishing her purpose, however, the team suddenly backed down and pinned her between the wheel and gate post. Three men were called to extricate her from her painful position. WINE OF THE WOODS invigorates the Liver DR. SCHENCK'S Pulmonic Syrup, Sea Weed Tonic, and Mandrake Pills.

These medicines have undoubtedly performe nore cures of Consumption than any other remed mown to the American public. They are con-ounded of vegetable ingredients, and contain not ng which can be injurious to the human constitucion.

Other remedies advertised as cures of Consumption, probably contain opium, which is a somewhat langerous drug in all cases, and if taken freely by consumptive patients, it must do great injury; for te tendency is to confine the morbid matter in the system, which, of course, must make a cure impossible. sible.

Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup is warranted not to contain a particle of opium: It is composed of powerful but harmless herbs, which act on the lungs, liver, stomach and blood, and thus correct all morbid secretions, and expei all the diseased matter from the body. These are the only means by which consumption can be cured, and as Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup, Sea Weed Tonic, and Mandrake Pills are the only medicines which operate in this way, it is obvious they are the only genuine cure for Pulmonary Consumption. Each bottle of this invaluable medidine is accompanied by full directions.

DISTRICT OF REDDING, ss. Probate Court, September 5th, 1374.

WHEREAS, application has been made to me, as Judge of the Court of Probate for the District of Redding, by Phèbe Jane St. John, as Guardian of J. Edward St. John. of said District, a minor of about the age of nineteen years, for my consent, according to law, for the conveyance by her, as such Guardian, of the interest of said minor in the following real estate, situated in said district, his interest therein being one undivided third part thereof, viz:—One piece of land containing thirteen hundred square feet, more or less, bounded north by land of the Gilbert & Bennett Manufacturing Company, east and south by land of the estate of John O. St. John, deceased, and west by the Danbury & Norwalk Railroad. One other piece containing thirty-eight hundred square feet, more or less, bounded north and west by land of the said Gilbert & Bennett Manufacturing Company, east and south by land of estate of said John O. St. John. For further and more particular description of premises reference being had to the files of said Court. And, whereas, Alonzo Byington and Matthew Perry, of said district, the persons appointed by said Court of Probate, for that purpose, have certified to me in writing, under oath, the value of said real estate of said minor, at the sum of Thirty-three Dollars and Thirty-three and one-third Cents.

Now, it is ordered, that notice be given that application for my consent to such conveyance, will be made at the Probate Office in Redding, on the 26th day of September, 1874, at 1 o'clock in the afternoon, which notice shall consist of a publication of a copy of this order for two weeks successively, in the Norwalk Gazette, a weekly newspaper published nearest the place where said real estate, at least two weeks prior to the day appointed for making such application.

SYMPTOMS OF CATARRH BY DR. ROWE The symptoms of catarrh in its most acute stage are those of a severe cold, so much so that many imagine they are suffering fromsevere cold, and wonder why it is that instead of its wearing away they should be constantly adding to it, by taking fresh cold as they imagine : for the slightest exposure to a draft or inclement weather, the wind merely blowing on some aggravates the symptoms and gives to it the appearance of having taken fresh cold. Under this impression nothing is done for it more than the ordinary remedies for a cold, which, of course, are at such a time, ineffectual, and when it is ultimately will.
