Third POW group returns from Hanoi

CLARK AIR BASE, Philippines (UPI) - A third wave of 108 POWs, all but two in apparent good physical condition, flew to freedom Wednesday singing "God Bless America" and bowing their heads for a prayer of thankfulness.

"I've been in better places, but I've never been with better people. Our men have performed magnificently...They have performed magnificently...They have been first-class soldiers," said the ex-prisoners' spokesman, Air Force Col. John P. Flynn, 49, on their arrival here from North Vietnamese prison camps.

Flynn was the senior ranking prisoner held in the North. Deboarding from the C-41 transport's rear ramp directly onto a waiting bus. No one was allowed a clear look at him.

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Senate voted Wednesday to make it illegal for President Nixon to continue impoundment of federal highway construction funds.

The amendment was strongly opposed by Republicans, who argued that states and cities should be allowed to use federal funds to build mass transit lines.

Even Henry needs a job

by Fred Vollono

Now that the Vietnam War has come to an end, there will be many more people than just former military personnel storming the job market.

The following scene takes place in the offices of the F & S, "If we can't find a job it just isn't there," Employs Agency.

A short, stout man of about fifty sat patiently waiting to be interviewed. He wore thick black glasses and was about four days behind in his shaving.

"Gouldn't you clean up a bit?" asked the clerk.

"Well sir, I've been out of work for several weeks now."

"Name?"

"Kissing, Henry."

"Two go?" he asked.

"Yes, sir."

"That Polish?"

"No, it's German."

"What kind of work are you experienced in?"

"Well, I've had a small amount of experience in deciding the political future of several million people."
NIKE RIDGE, S.D. (UPI) - A federal grand jury indicted 31 persons Wednesday on charges of civil disorder, conspiracy, burglary, and armed seizure of the Oglala Sioux hamlet of Wounded Knee and the ransacking of a trading post.

The action came as a near-blizzard snow storm battered three drifts and disabled a zero-cooled off the countryside between the entrenched militant Indians and a surrounding force of some 500 government agents on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation.

Assistant Attorney General Clayton announced the indictments in Sioux Falls, where the grand jury had been investigating the occupation by members of the American Indian Movement (AIM).

He refused to identify the 31 persons named in 13 indictments so far and said their identities would not be revealed until all had been arrested.

They were expected to include some of the key leaders of AIM who engineered the occupation of Wounded Knee by 250 to 500 militants 15 days ago.

Nixon urges Congress to re-instate death penalty

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Nixon Wednesday urged Congress to restore the death penalty for murder committed in the course of serious federal crimes such as airline hijacking or kidnapping, and for other offenses like wartime treason or spying.

The President also proposed harsh new penalties for narcotic violations coupled with revisions on the discretion judges to release accused drug pushers on bail or to impose light sentences after conviction.

Nixon said the courts "are frequency let in more than escape hatch" for narcotic criminals.

The death installment of his written State of the Union report to Congress, Nixon also proposed a complete overhaul of the federal criminal code to make penalties more uniform and to eliminate outmoded crimes like "maintaining a United States carrier pigeon."

"I am proposing the restatement of the death penalty for war-related treason, sabotage and espionage, and for all specifically enumerated crimes under Federal jurisdiction from which death results," Nixon said.

He said the bill would overcome the objections of the Supreme Court which last year ruled capital punishment unconstitutional because of the uncertainty of its application.

The President's plan would make death the mandatory and automatic penalty for aggravated crimes-usually those involving a killing-unless a jury determined that the mitigating factor was present.

Assistant Attorney General Henry Peterson, who briefed newsmen at the White House, said the bill would bar the execution of anyone under 18 and the mentally incapacitated.

Nixon said death would be mandatory if the jury determined that the presence of an aggravating or more aggravating factors and the absence of all mitigating factors.

"Aggravating factors include the creation of grave risk or "quasi-utopian venture" and likened it to primitive societies which use witch-craft to keep away evil.

The new large institutions were incredibly expensive, Rothman said, and were done "in a grand way and presented as the glory of society."

"After 1850, however, the institutions had become "what we know of as modern-filthy, overcrowded, corrupt places," Rothman said.

Rothman is now working on a book about prison reform at the beginning of the 20th century, which included the payroll and probation systems, whose original functions were to "encounter the criminal to help adjust to his environment," Rothman said.

In practice, Rothman said, the payroll and probation systems have become mechanisms for relieving overcrowded courts by "plea bargaining," giving persons lower sentences in exchange for pleas of guilty.

Indefinite sentences have given payroll boards and wardens more power over prisoners, resulting in black inmates serving an average of one to two years longer than whites, Rothman said. He added that indefinite sentences tended to increase the time served by all inmates.

Rothman also said that research has shown that vocational training in prison makes no difference in the amount of reversion to criminal behavior.

"When we see rehabilitation used as a rationale we must be suspicious, indeed paranoid. We now know its sham qualities," Rothman said.

Military action predicted

by Fred Vallenzo

A staff writer for the Socialist weekly The Militant said in Humanities last night that the United States will get involved in another military action in Indochina because its objectives there have not been met.

Derrick Morrison, one of three Socialist antiwar activists from The Militant currently on nation wide tours to speak on "Vietnam and Nixon's World Strategy," said the cease fire does not mean the U.S. won't continue to pursue its objectives in Southeast Asia.

"The aim of the U.S. was to destroy the N.L.F.," he said, "and they have not accomplished this objective. This amounts, to a certain degree, to a defeat for the U.S."

The N.L.F. is the National Liberation Front, the military wing of Communist North Vietnam.

Morrison, the man who, in 1965 helped to organize the Detroit Committee to End the War in Vietnam, said the U.S. stalemate was due to two reasons. First was the "fear of the Vietnamese people," they proved that U.S. imperialism could be resisted.

The second was the antiwar movement in this country. "This movement made it difficult for the population to mobilize for war," he said. "It drained." The U.S. had launched its Tet offensive against the north, General William Westmoreland, Commander of the American forces in Vietnam reported from President Johnson 200 thousand additional troops. The President refused this request because, "it would explode the country economically due to the antiwar movements."

Morrison, also a Black Marxist journalist, said as long as the Thieu regime remains in power in the South, he will continue to fight to liberate more areas and keep the creation of assisting puppet governments," he said, "only when this is done will the war follow its natural conclusion, a government of workers and peasants."

The author of several pamphlets concerning Black liberation, Morrison said it is clear there will be no peace in the world as long as U.S. foreign policy is "based on what is good for General Motors and other big business concerns."

Morrison said as long as capitalism exists in this country we will have many more wars like Vietnam and only a manichean Socialist movement here will prevent this."

Morrison's lecture was sponsored by Experimental College and the Young Socialists' Alliance.

Judo Club's constitution rejected by ASG Senate

The ASG senate voted again last night to reject the constitution of the UConn Judo Club. Twelve members were present for the meeting; 10 members had to vote favorably for the constitution to be approved. Senators Robert Eber and David Brooks voted against the constitution. Senator Alan Emerthal abstained.

Brooks opposed one article of the constitution which stipulated that the club would be open to University and staff as well as all undergraduates. Brooks objected to the fact that this activity would be supporting members who have not paid the undergraduate activity fee. This was the second time Brooks disapproved of the Judo Club's constitution.

ASG president Melanie Deitch vetoed the appropriation for the Judo Club's constitution. ASG president Melanie Deitch vetoed the appropriation for the Judo Club's constitution. She said as long as there is a non-surety bond, pending appearance in Circuit Court 11, Willimantic on March 13 by UConn police on campus on superior bench warrant charging sale and possession of controlled drugs.

Peter A. Dannell, 18, of Bayberry Lane, Willimantic, second semester (AG) student was arrested in his dorm on charges of cultivation of marijuana and possession of controlled drugs. He was released in $500 non-surety bond, pending appearance in Circuit Court 11, April 3.

Robert D. Rice, 19, of East Rd, Warren, Mass. first semester (AG), was arrested on charges of cultivation of marijuana and possession of controlled drugs. He also was released in $500 non-surety bond pending a Circuit Court 11 appearance on April 3.

Other arrests by the University Police include:

Paul P. Ronaller, 22, of 24 Manor Circle, East Hartford, an eighth semester student was arrested at 8:40 a.m. on March 13 by UConn police on campus on a superior bench warrant charging sale and possession of controlled drugs was presented in Superior Court in Rockville. His case was continued to April 3 and bond was set at $10,000.

Ronald P. Cerrano, 19, 244 Parker Farm Rd, Wallingford was arrested March 15 at 11:15 a.m. on campus on charge of assault in the third degree. He was released on a written promise to appear in Circuit Court 11, Willimantic on March 27. He allegedly was involved in an assault in a men's dormitory. Cerrano is not a student.

Experimental shuttlebus lacking daily commuters

by Dean Redfern

The "experimental" four corners shuttlebus, which began Feb. 5, "has not met our expectations," said Harold R. Gagne, supervisor of UConn's shuttlebus system.

It's "a common fact of dollar and cents," he said. The shuttlebus runs from 7:30 a.m. continuously through 5:30 p.m. and averages 150 to 175 riders with approximately "100 regular customers. The purpose of the experiment was to relieve traffic and parking problems on campus." At least 500 daily users are needed for the experiment to succeed, he said. "A hundred and fifty cars less" on campus would be "heading in the right direction."

The four corners shuttlebus leaves the physical sciences building at 10 a.m., 10 after and half past each hour. It proceeds up route 195 to route 44A, then down Birch Road to North Eagleville Road via Hunting Lodge Road. There are 14 bus stops, including all apartment complexes on the route.

There are also three central campus and two hilltop shuttles in UConn's bus system. The total of riders since September is a half million with 150,000 alone in February.

Agency aids radiology

The University of Connecticut School of Medicine has become one of five major university medical centers set up across the country for education, training and research in the radiological health sciences by the U.S. Public Health Service (PHS).

Dr. Jacob I. Fabrikant, head of the school's department of radiology, says the federal agency has provided about $100,000 worth of educational equipment and learning files of radiologic films to carry out examination and research programs in radiological health at the school.

These are housed in a special Radiological Health Sciences Learning Laboratory here. Establishment of the centers came about because of concern by the PHS about future manpower needs as well as possible hazards stemming from the rapidly increasing use of X-rays for medical diagnosis and treatment, Fabrikant said.

The initial program was developed at the University of California medical school at San Francisco and continues there. Other new centers are at the University of California medical school at Los Angeles, the Johns Hopkins School of Medicine in Baltimore, and Meharry Medical College School of Medicine in Nashville, Tenn.

These institutions have formed a committee for the continuing development of the radiological health sciences learning laboratories under the aegis of the American College of Radiology.

Fabrikant says that, with present operating methods, and if the current trend in the spiraling use of X-rays continues, meeting the demands of radiological health care delivery would take virtually the entire output of the nation's roughly 100 medical schools to provide the radiologists needed in 1980.

"What it really means is that we are going to have to train other radiological health workers to take X-rays properly and permit the use of the radiologists' medical skills as they should be used for evaluating and interpreting X-rays after they are taken," Fabrikant says.

He adds, "We are not using these highly skilled physicians now nearly as efficiently as we should."

Fabrikant noted that the volume of X-rays taken is staggering:

About seven in 10 of all patients seen in clinics and hospitals are X-rayed at some point in their diagnosis or treatment.

During 1970 — and these figures have increased since — about 125 million Americans had some 650 million X-rays taken.

"If you have a number of medical and dental problems over the years," Dr. Fabrikant notes, "you may be subjected to radiation exposure from X-rays many times for many good reasons."

But there is always some risk, however small, of damage to the cells and tissues of the body from such ionizing radiation, and such damage may be cumulative. Far better records of this clinical activity related to specific patients who may have been exposed need to be kept, he says.

In addition to current uses of X-rays — for such things as dental diagnosis and treatment, for chest and stomach diseases, before and after internal surgery, when bones are broken or dislocated, and others — newer radiation sources are now commonly employed.

Many of these are radioisotopes — radioactive forms of ordinary elements which can be tracked in body tissues with special equipment to analyze body processes. One such use involves radioactive iodine when thyroid gland function is being assessed.

Relatively harmless in themselves at very low doses used in diagnosis, radioisotopes when used do add to the total body burden of ionizing radiation received by an individual over his lifetime.

Proposed FSSO changes

The following changes and other actions (as summarized in the Daily Campus on February 26) have been made to the constitution and by-laws of the proposed Federation of Student Service Organizations. They represent a consensus among drafting committees, representatives, and organization spokesmen, several student representatives, participants at public hearing, and reflect various published sentiments. They are grouped here according to areas of expressed student concern.

These corrections will render the following documents published in full last November, 1972, favored in the coming special session (as in By-Laws 1.5) to preclude any proposition endorsed by the signatures of 5 percent of the undergraduate enrollment. It shall be required to convene in special session (as in By-Laws 1.5) to consider any proposition endorsed by the signatures of 10 percent of the undergraduate enrollment.

Add 2.15 (Constitution): 2.11 The Central Committee shall convene every four weeks in “town meeting” format, during a week in which no other meeting of that Committee is regularly scheduled. The sole order of business at such sessions shall be to provide an opportunity for any registered student to address the Committee on any topic, or to address inquiries to the Committee’s membership. Such a “town meeting” session shall also be convened during any other week in which no other meeting of the Central Committee is scheduled, upon petition of 5 percent of the undergraduate enrollment. The Central Committee shall transact no other business at any such session.

These additions provide for a guarantee of responsiveness to the sentiments of students not customarily involved in student government, but who wish to influence the agenda. Taken together, they ensure that the action of the Central Committee or of constituent components need go unchallenged by the student body.

IARC representation

Add to 9.22: “All voting members... Elections Policy, except as otherwise provided by area government, arrangements recognized and endorsed by the IARC.” (This is intended to preclude the FSSO constitution from usurping area government arrangements which are serving their constituents well according to some different current procedures.)

Amendments

Conflicts of original wording have been corrected at 5.83, 6.53, 6.54, 7.82, 7.83 to render the amendment procedures of all constituent components consistent with the provisions of 8.1, 8.2 and 8.3. In other words, amendments require a vote of the governing body, endorsement by the Central Committee, ratification by the student body, and acceptance by the Trustees to take effect.

Committers’ Union

Add to 9.21: “It is recognized that for purposes of this constitution...” Add to 9.22: “For such a purpose, to recognize an already registered group which substantially fulfills the requirements of this Constitution.”

Financial matters

Add to Financial Policy: “In assigning funds to the Resident Student Organization or to the Committers’ Union, the proportionate membership of all constituent organizations considered in relation to each other must be a principal criterion for such decisions.”

A powerful new dramatic piece aimed at cracking the facade of conventional theater will premiere at the University of Connecticut's Fine Arts Center Mobius Theater March 16-24 at 8:15 p.m.

Directed by the effort will be one of the nation's top avant-garde theater designers. Prof. Jerry Rojo will lead a seven-member company of University Department of Dramatic Arts students.

Entitled "Baal Games," the piece is a free adaptation of Bertolt Brecht's play "Baal."

The performance, using Brecht's script as a baseline, will blend improvisations on the drama's action with direct use of "Baal's" poetry and prose.

Shunning the artificial and illusion of costumes and scenery, the group "works basically with actors and space," Professor Rojo said. "We make everything out of ourselves and the space. Everyone is on stage all the time and nothing is hidden," he added.

Professor Rojo has been working with his students since last fall, training them through some of the latest psycho-physical dramatic techniques. His work has been influenced by such innovators as Jerzy Grotowski and his theory of the "Poor Theater." Professor Rojo also has been closely associated with Richard Schechner and has drawn on Artaud's concept of the "Theater of Cruelty."

The UConn drama professor has won critical acclaim for creating the "environments" and "settings" for such events. "Baal Games" is the UConn Mobius installation in which his group will perform. His most recent achievement as a designer was the new Manhattan Project production of Samuel Beckett's "Endgame."

"Baal" was written in 1927 and premiered in New York last month. One reviewer praised Brecht's work as a "breathtaking environment...an uncompromising challenging event."

Ticket information may be obtained from the Box Office at 429-2912.

Performers are: Mark Graham, Scott A. Lindstrom, Claudia Thompson, Jennifer Ayward, Lon Winetra, Shirley Wassilakas, and Thomas Drougoole.

String Quartet soloists present chamber concert

by Lora Livengood

Tickets sold out within the first day of box office sales for the chamber series concert featuring the New England String Quartet Plus Two. The two additional artists are pianist Jean-Pierre Rampal and guitarist Oscar Ghiglia. The concert will take place Thursday evening at 8:15 in Von der Mehden Recital Hall.

The New England String Quartet, in residence here at the University of Connecticut, includes Charles Tabony, and Theodore Arm, violists; Robert Coleman, violinist, and Bruno DiCecco, cellist. They are widely recognized in the area.

Jean-Pierre Rampal born in Marseille, France. studied flute with his father, who was a flute professor at the Conservatore. He did not decide to become a flutist, however, until his third year in medical school where he was called up by the military. When he learned that he was going to Germany, he went AWOL. He then went to Paris and attended classes at the National Conservatoire. He left five months later with the first prize for flute playing.

Oscar Ghiglia was born in Livorno, Italy. He attended the Conservatorio di Santa Cecilia in Rome and has studied guitar under Andrea Segovia and Alfredo Diaz. He later became Segovia's assistant at the University of California at Berkeley and he also taught at the University of Missouri at Kansas City.

The program promises a rich selection of chamber music ranging from "Baal" to Stravinsky's "Danses" and Beethoven's String Quartet Op. 18 No. 4.

These three young men just made the discovery of a lifetime. The oldest is 34.

Remember when young people could get ahead in business simply by growing old? It was a good system for those with a little talent and a lot of patience, but today's technology moves too fast to wait for seniority.

At Kodak, our extensive involvement in basic research has made the need for fresh, young thinking more pressing than ever. So we hire the best new talent we possibly can. Then we do both of us a favor by turning them loose on real problems, and giving them the freedom and responsibility they need to solve them.

That's how three Kodak scientists in their early thirties just made a breakthrough in liquid lasers, developing an organic dye laser with a continuous beam. Their discovery means more than just a new kind of laser. It means a whole range of new laser applications, in fields from medicine to communications.

It was the kind of discovery most men and women work a lifetime for. Yet these young men still have most of their lifetimes ahead of them.

Why do we give young men and women so much freedom and responsibility? Because it's good business, and we're in business to make a profit. But in furthering our own business interests, we also further society's interests. And that's good.

After all, our business depends on society. So we care what happens to it.

Soccer brings warmth

by Art Horwitz

Husky soccer coach Joe Morrone has found a way to beat old man winter.

What Morrone has done is quite simple. He's given up the cold, harsh and unpredictable months of winter and substituted them with a warm, mild, and very predictable field house—creating the largest and most prestigious indoor soccer tournament ever held in the process.

Third Annual Tournament

This year, the Third Annual University of Connecticut Seven-On-A-Side Indoor Soccer Tournament will take place Saturday and Sunday in both Guyer Gymnasium and the Field House with 24 teams competing.

Included will be four teams from UConn, the tournament's host powerhouse as the University of Akron, the initiators of such a tournament in the United States, nationally ranked University of Bridgeport, the host Southern Connecticut State, Keene State and the University of New Haven.

Joe Morrone

University of New Haven.

"This is the largest indoor collegiate tourney in the United States, six man or seven," said Morrone. "This opens a new era of soccer competition and displays UConn as a leader in the development of soccer in this country."

Morrone said he first got the idea of indoor soccer when he was in Poland with the United States team on an exchange program in 1966. "I made sure I picked up the measurements of the goals before I left," he said. "When I got back, I built some indoor goals and started an informal program as head coach of Middlebury (Vt.) College. Because of the program I found when I arrived at UConn, I was able to initiate a more formal program, including the indoor tourney."

And what Morrone, and more recently other colleges across the nation believe is that soccer should and can be played throughout the year.

"The notion that soccer can be played only when it's in season is no longer valid," said Morrone. "A team can't be good unless it plays constantly."

Teams pick up program

"Three years ago, many of the teams which came to our first tournament were playing indoor soccer for the first time on an organized basis. But now, all the schools coming here have some kind of bonafide program."

But the real reason Morrone is in the indoor soccer tournament business is for the benefit of his team.

"My main objective is to improve the quality of our play as a team. You can't improve unless you play top-flight competition."

No soccer scholarships

"Connecticut gives neither soccer scholarships nor aid to foreign students, and since we are a state university, admissions lean more towards state residents," Morrone said. "As a result, we have to try and provide a program where young American boy who is willing to work and wants to play has the mechanism by which to improve."

"We can't do anything about the age of the boy when he starts playing. But we can do something about the amount of soccer he gets to play, and indoor soccer gives him the opportunity to make up lost time."

Purpures.

This weekend's Third Annual University of Connecticut Indoor Soccer Tournament have been announced by UConn Coach Joe Morrone, the tournament manager.

The six games, all in the Guyer Gym, have been listed for Saturday's opening round play.

Then continue all day Sunday, in both the Field House and Guyer Gym, until the championship game at 5 p.m. on Sunday in the Field House.

There are 24 teams, allocated with Connecticut, the host school, listing four of them. These teams are grouped into six groups of four. They play a round robin with their own groupings in the Saturday openers with eight teams eliminated at the close of the day's action. Each of these games is for 20 minutes.

The sixteen teams remaining in Sunday's schedule will play 30 minute games if they enter the winner's bracket and 20 minute games if they are in the consolation bracket.

Group No. 1 on Saturday, from 8 to 10:30 a.m., includes Springfield, Connecticut "D", Eastern Connecticut and Southern Connecticut. Tuesday's schedule.

Group No. 2, from 10:30 to 1 p.m., includes Bridgeport, Connecticut "C", Bahoon and Westfield.

Group No. 3 lists Adelphi, New Haven, Plymouth and Jersey City, from 1 to 3:30.

Group No. 4, from 3:30 to 6:30, is made up of Montclair State, Brandeis, Connecticut "B" and Fairleigh-Dickinson at Treadwell man winter.

Group No. 5, from 6 to 8:30, matches Connecticut "A", Clark, Coast Guard, and Nework. Group No. 6, from 8:30 to 11 p.m., includes Akron with Central Connecticut, Fairfield Dickinson at Madison, and Keene State.

Sunday's action begins at 9 a.m. with games in both the Field House and Guyer Gym.

Polo team defends title; plays Yale in semifinals

by Art Horwitz

If UConn's capturing the 1972 national collegiate indoor soccer title was a fluke, the Huskies will have a chance to disprove that notion when they take on Yale in the semifinals of this year's tournament tonight at the Ox Ridge Hunt Club in Darien at 9 p.m.

Last March, the Huskies upset Yale, also in the semifinals, breaking its skin of an unprecedented five consecutive national titles. UConn went on to edge the University of Virginia for the title.
